HEALING THE INVISIBLE: HOMEOPATHY IN ANXIETY, DEPRESSION, AND EMOTIONAL TRAUMA

Dr. Prachi Middha is a homeopathic physician, educator, researcher, and speaker based in Jaipur, India, where she has been practising from her childhood home after spending 25 years away, including 20 years abroad. Before pursuing homeopathy, she built a distinguished career in engineering and research, earning a B.Tech in Chemical Engineering from IIT Delhi and a PhD in Nanoparticle Aerosols from the University of Delaware, USA.

Dr. Middha has worked in the oil and gas industry, served as an engineering professor in Norway, and led research for a genomics company in London. She later earned a Postgraduate Diploma in Homeopathy from Allen's College of Homeopathy, Chelmsford, London, and completed her FHPC in Psychiatric Homeopathy and Counselling. She has also trained with renowned homeopaths from India and abroad, integrating diverse approaches to provide patient-centred homeopathic care.

With over eight years of clinical practice, Dr. Middha has supported patients with a wide range of acute and chronic conditions, including cancer, systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE), autism, depression, anxiety, schizophrenia, infertility, and PCOD. An avid learner, she continues to expand her knowledge while sharing her expertise through lectures and webinars.
